Give Her a Crowded House.

The theatre-goers of Paris will on Friday evening, Nov. 25th, have a treat that will gladden their hearts. After much solicitation and correspondence the management of the Grand has succeeded in booking Miss Adelaide Thurston in "Polly Primrose" for the above date, and his efforts to secure this little star should be appreciated. Miss Thurston is a prime favorite throughout the South and is greeted with crowded houses wherever she appears. Her many acts of benevolence to Confederate homes for the old ex-Confederates and their orphans has endeared her to their loyal hearts. Miss Thurston is small and polite and wonderfully magnetic, winning her way immediately into the hearts of her audience. Her support is first-class, all being of a high class.

Mr. James R. McCann, an old Paris boy, takes the part of the "old Southern gentleman," and wins the applause of his audiences wherever he appears. Mr. McCann's wife and niece, Miss Pearl Hammond, also appear in the cast. Let our citizens turn out en-masse for this entertainment and by giving Miss Thurston a hearty welcome show also that we appreciate the talent of our home people with her.

Just Received.

I have just received 500 barrels of fancy New York apples. These apples are fine for either eating or cooking and will keep for six months. See me before you buy your apples and I will save you money.

ANOTHER BIG BATTLE.

Increased Activity Indicates That One is Imminent.

General Attack on Port Arthur Resumed—A Shell From a Japanese Naval Gun Exploded a Magazine Near the Arsenal.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Consul General Fowler Thursday cabled the state department from Chefoo that the situation at Port Arthur is extremely critical, the outer forts having fallen into the possession of the Japanese. He also states that three Japanese torpedo boat destroyers are lying outside of Chefoo harbor and that the Russian crew of the torpedo boat destroyer are transferring their arms and supplies to a Chinese cruiser which is posted in front of the Russian consulate.

Tokio, Nov. 21.—It is reported that the Japanese, after successfully mining, occupied a counter scarp on Sung Shu mountain last Friday.

Increasing activity along the Shakh river seems to indicate the imminence of another great battle. The Russian feints, evidently intended to draw a Japanese attack, are uniformly repulsed.

Army headquarters Saturday received the following report from Field Marshal Oyama's report, dated November 18:

"At dawn to-day a detachment of the enemy made an attack near Hsinglungtun. They were repulsed by us. Since this morning the enemy in the vicinity of Shakh village have indirectly bombarded our positions with mortars and field pieces. They have effected no damage. A body of the enemy's infantry were discovered at Hsiama and Hsiaoyantzu. We shelled them and they fled in confusion to a neighboring village. The enemy have burnt Huangshetzu and villages to the southeast on the right bank of the River Hun."

A dispatch from the army besieging Port Arthur, dated November 19, says:

"During the bombardment this afternoon a shell from a Japanese naval gun exploded a Russian magazine near the arsenal. Our operations against all the forts are proceeding as prearranged from Manchurian headquarters. At noon to-day we shelled the Huesian infantry engaged in entrenching east of Reuchiangtun, and also infantry in the rear of the villages, causing them to flee in confusion. In other directions there is no change to note."

Chefoo, Nov. 21.—The general attack on Port Arthur was resumed November 18 or 19, according to the report of persons arriving here Sunday from Dalny. They say that the Japanese are so secretive that it is difficult in Dalny to learn the true facts. Even the officers detailed to work at the base do not know what their comrades at the front are doing. November 16 a peculiarly heavy explosion shook every ship lying at Dalny. The explosion was ascribed to the blowing up of land mines or a magazine.

COL. W. C. P. BRECKINRIDGE. The Noted Kentuckian Passes Away Owing to a Stroke of Paralysis.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 21.—Col. William Campbell Preston Breckinridge died at 11:40 o'clock Saturday night from a stroke of paralysis sustained Wednesday. He had been gradually sinking for 24 hours, and for that length of time the case had been known to be hopeless. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon from the First Presbyterian church, with burial in the Lexington cemetery.

W. C. P. Breckinridge was born in Baltimore August 28, 1837. He was the son of Rev. Robert Jefferson Breckinridge. He was a graduate of Center college, University of Louisville, the Central University of Richmond, and Cumberland university, of Tennessee.

He entered the confederate service and became colonel of the Ninth Kentucky cavalry, and commanded a brigade when it surrendered.

He served in congress from 1884 to 1895 from the Seventh district of Kentucky, when he was defeated for the nomination. Since that time he had devoted his attention to editorial work.

Decapitated Body Found.

Shamokin, Pa., Nov. 21.—Hunters near Hickory Ridge discovered the nude and headless body of a man containing five bullet wounds. Search is being made by the police authorities for the missing head. It is supposed the man was decapitated after being shot to death.

Queen Dowager's Birthday.

Rome, Nov. 21.—The Queen Dowager Margherita's 53d birthday anniversary was celebrated Sunday throughout Italy by a display of flags and bunting and in various other ways. The United States cruiser Cleveland hoisted her pennants.

Will Enter the Peace Conference.

Rome, Nov. 21.—It is officially announced that Italy has agreed to take part in the new peace conference to be held at The Hague, as proposed by the United States. It reserves only the question of the date of the meeting and the program.

Lady Curzan Taken to Highcliff Castle

London, Nov. 21.—Lady Curzan was taken by a special train Sunday from Walmer to Bournemouth, where she will spend the winter at Highcliff castle, Christ Church, a mile outside the town. She bore the journey well.

FASHIONABLE FINERY.

The front panel is quite the newest thing in skirts.

Most of the small hats are tricorne or boat-shaped turbans.

The crown is quite distinct from the brim in the new turbans.

Tulle is one of the latest trimming ideas and is used in great quantities.

Ribbon of two contrasting shades is very smart for trimming tailor hats.

Coq de roche is most effective as a relief note with gray-green and brown.

Not for years has the separate wrap been such an important feature of dress.

The plush coat, put away years ago, is to make its reappearance this winter.

Aigrettes are to be much worn and are of spangled and jetted tulle for turbans.

Lovely poke bonnets trimmed with ostrich tips are shown for wee maidens.

Lots of fire brown and spinach green will be exploited in panne velvet and net.

This new "yetta" skin is not nearly so becoming as the soft, long-haired furs.

It would be difficult not to find at least one becoming color in the approved list.

As long as big sleeves remain in vogue the short cape garment will be to the fore.

Toques made of velvet leaves and fruit are very modish, particularly the vine and leaves of the muscatel grape.

"WHACKS"

And What They Mean.

When Old Mother Nature gives you a "whack," remember "there's a reason," so try and say "thank you," then set about finding what you have done to demand the rebuke, and try and get back into line, for that's the happy place after all.

Curious how many highly organized people fail to appreciate and heed the first little, gentle "whacks" of the good old Dame, but go right along with the habit, whatever it may be, that causes her disapproval. Whisky, Tobacco, Coffee, Tea or other unwholesome treatment of the body, until serious illness sets in or some chronic disease.

Some people seem to get on very well with those things for awhile, and Mother Nature apparently cares but little what they do.

Perhaps she has no particular plans for them and thinks it little use to waste time in their training.

There are people, however, who seem to be selected by Nature to "do things." The old Mother expects them to carry out some department of her great work. A portion of these selected ones off and again seek to stimulate and then deaden the tool (the body) by some one or more of the drugs—Whisky, Tobacco, Coffee, Tea, Morphine, etc.

You know all of these throw down the same class of alkaloids in Chemical analysis. They stimulate and then depress. They take from man or woman the power to do his or her best work.

After these people have drugged for a time, they get a hint, or mild "whack," to remind them that they have work to do, a mission to perform, and should be about the business, but are loafing along the wayside and become unfitted for the fame and fortune that waits for them if they but stick to the course and keep the body clear of obstructions so it can carry out the behests of the mind.

Sickness is a call to "come up higher." These hints come in various forms. It may be stomach trouble or bowels, heart, eyes, kidneys or general nervous prostration. You may depend upon it when a "whack" comes it's a warning to quit some abuse and do the right and fair thing with the body.

Perhaps it is coffee drinking that offends. That is one of the greatest causes of human disorder among Americans.

Now, then, if Mother Nature is gentle with you and only gives light little "whacks" at first to attract attention, don't abuse her consideration, or she will soon hit you harder, sure.

And you may also be sure she will hit you very, very hard if you insist on following the way you have been going.

It seems hard work to give up a habit, and we try all sorts of plans to charge our ill feelings to some other cause than the real one.

Coffee drinkers when ill will attribute the trouble to bad food, malaria, overwork and what not, but they keep on being sick and gradually getting worse, until they are finally forced to quit entirely, even the "only one cup a day." Then they begin to get better, and unless they have gone long enough to set up some fixed organic disease, they generally get entirely well.

It is easy to quit coffee at once and for all, by having well made Postum, with its rich, deep, seal brown color, which comes to the beautiful golden brown when good cream is added, and the crisp snap of good, mild Java is there if the Postum has been boiled long enough to bring it out.

It pays to be well and happy for good old Mother Nature then sends us her blessings of many and various kinds and helps us to gain fame and fortune.

Strip off the handicaps, leave out the deadening habits, heed Mother Nature's hints, quit being a loser and become a winner. She will help you sure if you cut out the things that keep you back.

"There's a reason," and a profound one.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

THE EMPEROR'S GIFT.

Frederick the Great Statue Unveiled in Washington.

The Ceremony Was Marked By Great Military and Official Display—The President Made the Principal Address of the Day.

Washington, Nov. 19.—At the white house Friday night, President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at dinner the special commissioners of Emperor William at the unveiling of the statue of Frederick the Great in this city Saturday, Lieut. Gen. Lowenfeld and Maj. Count Schmettow. The building was handsomely illuminated for the occasion. The dinner was given in the state dining room, the decorations being golden gate and Carnot roses and ferns. The United States marine band furnished the music.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Hailed by a military blare of 20 trumpets the bronze statue of Frederick the Great, presented to the American people by Emperor William, was unveiled Saturday afternoon by the Baroness Speck von Sternburg, the wife of the German ambassador.

The weather was ideal. The line of march was crowded with spectators. Both the war and navy departments were closed at noon to permit the officers to participate in the ceremony.

The ceremony was marked by great military and official display. The statue was presented on behalf of the emperor by his personal envoy, the German ambassador, who made a brief address.

The president made the chief address of the day and accepted the gift on behalf of the American people. Remarks were made by Lieut. Gen. Chaffee, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Gillespie, of the general staff, and master of ceremonies; Lieut. Gen. Von Loewenfeld, one of the special commissioners sent to the unveiling by the emperor, and Charlemagne Tower, American ambassador to Germany.

Seldom has the national capital witnessed a more brilliant and distinguished assemblage than was gathered on the grand esplanade of the army war college around the pedestal of the statue.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—A memorial to the president of the United States and to the American people has been issued by the Polish Roman Catholic Federation of the United States of America, from the federation's headquarters in this city, protesting against the acceptance of the statue of Frederick the Great, given to the United States by Emperor William of Germany and to be unveiled in Washington Saturday. The memorial characterizes Frederick II. as a despot and declares that the statue should find no place on "soil made sacred by the blood of martyrs of liberty."

Missouri State Building Burned.

St. Louis, Nov. 21.—The Missouri state building was destroyed by fire resulting from the explosion of a hot-water heater. The blaze shot up through the rotunda and the north wing and rotunda were a mass of flames within 10 minutes after the explosion. Loss $20,000.

Vice President-Elect Fairbanks.

World's Fair Attendance.

St. Louis, Nov. 21.—The record of admissions at the World's fair for the week ending Saturday, November 19, shows a total of 552,019. The grand total since the opening of the fair is 17,617,905.

BIG FIRE IN CINCINNATI.

Property to the Amount of Half a Million Dollars Went Up in Smoke.

Cincinnati, Nov. 21.—Fire caused a loss Sunday in the central part of the city, on the south side of Fourth, between Walnut and Main streets, and also on Main, near Fourth, approximately $500,000. It started about noon in an abandoned building in the rear of the Pounsford Stationery Co. There was a strong breeze that caused the flames to spread rapidly so that with the whole fire department at work it required several hours to get the conflagration under control and early in the afternoon a general conflagration was apprehended. The loss on the several five-story buildings was $140,000, distributed as follows: McMicken estate, $75,000; Rudolph Wur-litzer, $40,000; Baker estate, $10,000; Sammet Bros., $10,000; J. Frank Jones, $5,000. The nine-story St. Paul building, owned by the Emerys, stopped the fire westward and was damaged about $500.

Next west of the St. Paul building is the 18-story new building of the First National bank, which suffered no damage. But little was saved east of the St. Paul building to Main street. As the McMicken estate all went to the University of Cincinnati, that institution is a heavy loser. The heavy losses were on stocks of merchandise, as follows: The Rudolph Wur-litzer Co., pianos and musical instruments, $200,000; Insurance, $220,000. The Pounsford Stationery Co., $60,000; F. A. Schwill & Sons, manufacturers of glassware and bottlers supplies, $55,000; Queen City window glass

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Remarkable Coincidence Which Would Have Made a Bad Case for Innocent Man.

"Several years ago I took a late train from Boston to New York," said a man in business in Kansas City, according to the Star. "In the morning I was awakened earlier than usual by the porter, who said that a robbery had been committed on the sleeper during the night and that all the passengers would have to get up. Some one had taken six $100 bills from the clothing of a gentleman who occupied a berth in the middle of the car. Every section had been taken before he left Boston, and as the train had been almost constantly in motion it seemed certain that the person who had committed the theft was still on the car. The porter said no one had been aboard but the passengers and that none of them had left. It was proposed to search everybody. A man who had a berth directly opposite from the one who had been robbed objected. He told his name and said any one might easily find that he was a man of good reputation. In the meantime some officers boarded the car and after a little sweating got the money from the colored porter who was the guilty one. Then the passenger who had refused to be searched asked the officers to examine his pockets. This seemed strange, but he insisted. In an inside pocket they found six $100 bills. It was merely a coincidence that he should have the same amount of money as the other passenger had lost, and in exactly the same denominations, but he knew that under the circumstances he could hardly establish his innocence. How was that for a case of circumstantial evidence?"

WITH DUKES AND THINGS.

Newcomer in Society Who Got Mixed Up with Persons of Title.

Mrs. Porkdollar has not as yet got over the novelty of riches. At the same time she is not inclined to admit that it is her great desire, relates London Answers, that the society with which she is now entitled to mix by virtue of her husband's wealth shall think she was born in the purple.

Recently she was at a big dinner party, and as she was being piloted from drawing-room to dining-room, she noticed a marble bust on one of the pillars in the hall.

"Do you know who that is?" she inquired of her cavalier.

"That is Marcus Aurelius," was the answer.

"Oh, is it, now?" ejaculated the lady. "But can you tell me," she added promptly, "whether it is the present marks or the late marks? I do get so mixed up with your dukes and things!"

Hats for gentlemen are now worn larger. They must be a size larger than formerly, so as to come down farther on the back of the head of the wearer. That is the latest authorized dispensation. On the whole, it is better than the old style of wearing a head too big for one's hat, as the saying goes. It dispenses with the implied swelling.—Boston Herald.

An English writer tells of a poor woman of London who wondered why the Lord permitted her worthless husband to live. "I suppose," she said, "the Lord has an idea that he'll repent, but I know better."

THE PILLS THAT CURE RHEUMATISM.

Mrs. Henry Story, of No. 532 Muskingum Ave., Zanesville, Ohio, says: "My husband suffered from rheumatism so that he could hardly stand. His back hurt and he had such pain in his left arm that he could not rest night or day. The doctor did him no good and it was not until he tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that he was helped. Six boxes cured him completely and he has not had an ache or a pain since. We think the pills are the best medicine in the world."

MARRY SIMON.

Col. Breckinridge Dead.

Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, the lawyer, the orator, the statesman, the editor, the friend, died at his home in Lexington, Saturday night, of paralysis, in his 67th year. In his death passes away the most brilliant mind of the South, yes, of these United States. His memory will long live in the hearts of his many friends in this country.

He was the son of the noted Presbyterian preacher, Dr. Robert J. Breckinridge, and brother of Gen. Jos. C. Breckinridge, who was an officer in the Confederate Army, but more recently Major General of Volunteers in the war with Spain and Inspector General of the United States Army. He was also a cousin of General John C. Breckinridge, once Vice President of the United States.

He was married three times. His first wife was Mrs. Lucretia H. Clay, a grand-daughter of Henry Clay; his second wife was Mrs. Irsa Desha, and the present Mrs. Breckinridge is his cousin, Mrs. Louise Scott Wing, the widow of Ramsey Wing, formerly United States Minister to Ecuador. Col. Breckinridge's only son, Desha Breckinridge, is 45 years of age and has been associated with his father in the practice of law. His daughter, Miss Sophonisby P. Breckinridge, who was the only woman ever admitted to the bar of Lexington, Ky., or to practice before the Court of Appeals of this state. His youngest daughter is Miss Curry Breckinridge, of Boston.

Yesterday afternoon the remains of Col. Breckinridge were laid to rest in the Lexington Cemetery. The funeral services were held at the first Presbyterian church at 2 o'clock. Dr. Muller, the pastor of that church; Dr. Rout, of Versailles, and Dr. Thompson, pastor of the Mt. Horeb church, of which he was a member, conducted the services.

The pall-bearers were: John H. Bell, Samuel T. Leavy, Henry L. Martin, Elley Blackburn, John A. Lewis, A. H. Sinclair, Edward Halley. All are members of Company A. as captain of which he entered the service of the Confederacy.

I AM making great preparations for the holiday trade and expect to have the largest stock of nice holiday goods that I have ever had, in fact large consignments are being received every day. Come to my store for your holiday goods and you will not have to go further.

Being In Jail Don't Stop Him.

Being behind the bars does not stop Harry Higgins, the burglar in Paris jail awaiting trial at November court, from stealing. On Thursday evening Chief of Police Hill locked up a man by the name of G. C. Wells, for safe keeping, he being very drunk. Next morning he said he had been robbed, while in jail of $150. The officers searched everywhere for the money but could not find it. He claimed to have had it pinned in the watch pocket of his pantaloons with a safety pin. He also showed a bank-book of a Georgetown bank where he had deposited that amount and had afterwards drawn it out. The officers thought probably he had been touched before Chief Hill arrested him. Jailer Judy, however, determined to keep up the hunt, and on Sunday morning he was awarded for his diligence by finding the money hid away in the cell occupied by the burglar, Harry Higgins. It was spread out behind the looking glass in his dresser. Mr. Wells claimed all along that some young fellow took his roll from him the evening he was put in jail. Higgins is undoubtedly an all-round crook and will get his just dues at the coming term of court.

Falling Off in Slaughter of Turkeys.

The slaughter of turkeys for the Thanksgiving market has fallen off in large numbers from the number killed last year. C. S. Brent & Bro. have up to this time killed 2,000 at Paris pens; last year they killed 3,000 for Thanksgiving market. At Millersburg pens they have killed 152 this year, 7,500 last year; at Carlisle, 300 this year, 7,000 last year; at Flemingsburg, 1,048 this year, 10,000 last year. This leaves a big crop still in the hands of the raisers, and the consequences will be that for Thanksgiving the prices in New York and Boston will be sky high, and the market probably flooded with them Christmas. They have been paying 9 cents in the country for them here.

The special turkey train spoken of by the Lexington papers carrying 300,000 pounds from that city must be a hoax, for we have it from good authority that not over 40,000 pounds of turkeys have been shipped from there up to this date.

BUY your Thanksgiving order from James Arkle. Will have everything in the market for Thanksgiving. Best oysters in the market at 35c per qt., large frying. All kinds of fruit and vegetables. A Brutal Murder.

Ed. Taylor, John Taylor and Jim Garfield Smith, negroes, entered Geo. Luigart's saloon, on North Limestone street, Lexington, about six o'clock Sunday evening, with pistols in their hand and with the words "kill all of the white dogs" proceeded to fire promiscuously, and finally backed out the door flourishing their weapons and daring anyone to follow them. After the smoke had cleared away William Moore, a white man was found dead on the floor, and the saloon fixtures were wrecked by the bullets. Moore leaves a wife and ten children, and it is said recently moved to Lexington from Bourbon county. A mob soon formed to hang the negroes, but were persuaded by the officers to disband. Great excitement reigned in Lexington until early Monday morning.

Gas Well Under Control.

William Meteer, on whose farm natural gas in apparently large quantities was struck about ten days ago, has about gotten the flow under control. He has inserted a one and a quarter inch pipe with a check valve, and whenever he wants to go to his barn at night he turns on the gas and it lights the entire lot. A number of capitalists have visited Mr. Meteer with propositions to develop the well, but he has not made any arrangements in regard to it so far.

I AM better prepared this year than ever to handle the holiday trade and am already receiving the goods. See me before you buy. J. T. HINTON.

This company seems to have been inspired with new life since Mr. Humbert has taken charge and is giving most satisfactory service to its patrons.

HALE/ OVER:

Out from the city's din,
My feet to-day
In the old, old way,
Followed the path they wandered in
Long years before my hair grew gray.
Down to the Pembroke hills
Where tangled vines
Of the berry-vines,
And grape and ivy the old spot fills.
And under the schoolhouse wall
I sat and heard them call—
"Ha-a-joy over!"
And then on the other side
The childish voices cried,
"Under!"

Listening to them so,
My thoughts to-day
Went far away,
And pictured the scenes of the long ago,
When the same old game I used to play,
And the tears unbidden came.
For faces long forgot
Hovered around the spot.
And sitting beneath the time-stained wall
I heard "Chips" and "Spider" and
"Walter" call,
"Ha-a-joy over!"
And off on the other side
It seemed my own voice cried,
"Under!"

Oh, to be back again
To that old way
For but a day!
To follow the cow-path through the lane,
For a mock fight under the hills.
With "Have a care!" and "Spider" and
And "That's no fair!"
While good-natured shouts the old yard fills.
Oh, to be under the wall
With the ball in my hand and call,
"Ha-a-joy over!"
And intoned to a minor cry,
The dear old friends reply,
"Under!"
—Maud R. Burton, in Youth's Companion.

CHAPTER VI.—CONTINUED.

"Provided, of course, monsieur gets outside," answered Jean-Renaud, smiling. "Has monsieur any commands for me?"

"None," replied Philip as the old soldier withdrew. The deaf Anatole, who seemed familiar with the habits of Englishmen, quickly arranged a bath, laid out a uniform from his new master's wardrobe—for his personal baggage had been sent him through the kindness of de Kersaint—and then withdrew. Hastily Philip dressed himself—and yet with unusual care, by the way—and descended to the hall. Finding the door open he entered the garden.

The song had ceased and the two maidens, the dolls lying neglected in their laps, were engaged in earnest conversation.

"And you think," he heard the smaller say, "that he would be my knight?"

"Mademoiselle, he is there!" exclaimed Josette, springing to her feet in much confusion, as she observed Grafton's approach.

The other girl turned her head slightly, saw him advancing, and as if to mark the difference between the mistress and the maid, rose slowly and calmly to her feet. In spite of her dignity her little heart was beating furiously. The dolls fell neglected to the ground. The end of their reign began that morning.

Grafton bowed profoundly before her, and as she returned his salutation with a sweeping courtesy, he looked curiously at her. So this was the Breton rose! She was a small, slender, pale little girl, between 13 and 14 years old, and rather delicate in appearance. Too old to be playing with dolls, certainly. Her head was crowned with a mass of hair black as a raven's wing, which fell down her back in a heavy braid tied with a scarlet ribbon. A pair of rather long airties terminating in long slender hands stretched from her immature sloping shoulders. Below the short skirt of her dress two long thin legs dropped into dainty slippers.

Philip was something of a connoisseur and he scanned her carefully and swiftly. Her eyes, he thought, were good, and blue he could see in spite of the downcast lids—a strange combination of black hair, pale face, and blue eyes, unusual but striking. Her hands were small, he noticed, and her feet, even then, charming. As for the rest that would come in time. She was a maiden of much promise he decided.

"Mademoiselle," he said respectfully, "have I the pleasure of addressing the Chatelaine of Josselin, the young Countess de Rohan?"

"Yes, monsieur," answered the girl simply, lifting her eyes to his as she spoke.

He started in surprise before their deep violet splendor—the eyes of a woman in the face of a child. Good heavens! They were glorious—decidedly this was promising.

"You are the English maid?" she queried gravely.

"Neither the one nor the other, mademoiselle," he answered, smiling at her frank question. "I was born in America."

"Ah!" cried the girl brightening, "my mother came from there. 'Tis a great land."

"The greatest the sun shines upon, mademoiselle," gravely answered Grafton.

"Except France, monsieur."

"Except France, little lady, since you are here," he returned gallily.

"And monsieur is not a lord?"

"There are no lords in America."

"Not even a knight?"

"Not yet, unless I may be your knight, mademoiselle."

"You hear, Josette?" cried the girl, turning delightedly to the other, "we won't have to play any more that you are a knight. Monsieur says he will be my knight. So few gentlemen come here, monsieur; we see no one," she went on, with a stateliness and ease which quite belied the ragged doll at her feet, the Persian dolls by her side, the short dress, and general air of unformed and undeveloped womanhood about her. "Monsieur le Marquis is here, of course. And Monsieur de Kersaint, who was a friend of my father's comes sometimes, and the masters of the dance, and the masters of the music, and the masters of the art, and all the other tiresome glads, and Jean-Renaud, so that I am glad to find a gentleman—Monsieur is gentle, of course?"

"I hope so, mademoiselle. I trust mademoiselle may find me so at any rate."

"Monsieur looks so. Is it not so, Josette?" frankly continued the child.

"Oh, indeed, yes, mademoiselle!" exclaimed the embarrassed but acquiescent maid.

"I do not doubt monsieur's breeding, but a maiden, motherless like I, monsieur, must be very careful how she takes a knight without finding out all about him, you see. Monsieur's family is old?"

"Very old, mademoiselle," answered the young man, smiling at the little comedy.

"Monsieur is an American, and America was only discovered—let me see—'tis scarce 300 years since, is it not, Josette?"

"Yes, mademoiselle, certainly," answered Josette, still agreeably concurring, though she knew nothing about it.

"But my family was English long before that time, mademoiselle," answered Grafton, "and Norman before that."

"Oh, you are part French, then?"

"My heart is all French, at least since I have met you, mademoiselle."

"Now, that is nicely said. You are a gentleman indeed, sir, and your family is old—not as old as the de Rohans, though."

"Mademoiselle, is anything so old or so beautiful as the de Rohans?"

"As to the age, monsieur, there is no doubt, but as to the other, there are only grandfather and myself left."

He took part in the play with a zest which surprised him, and the more he was thrown in contact with the strange and peculiar mind of the girl the more she interested him. She was a singular mixture of the young and the old, the very childish and the very wise. She stood, as it were, poised, half-way between the intellectual level of Josette, her playmate, on the one hand, and of the courtly old marquis, her preceptor and guide, on the other.

She was too old to play at dolls, he thought, too young to play at love. And yet she had done the one and was doing the other, although the "adorable Toto" had been neglected of late for the more adorable Philip. Shrewdness, wit, and common sense mingled in equal measure with unbounded credulity and the most romantic imagination. And her impetuosity and abandon were as evident as were her wisdom or her innocence.

Grafton kissed the little brown hand so often that he rather grew to like it. Every day brought him a different love-token of some sort and a new and imaginary task to be achieved.

But Mademoiselle Anne at last tired of simulation—the most obstinate imagination will weary in the end—and determined to endeavor to impart a touch of realism to the pretty game.

One day, therefore, she took him into one of the rooms of the high tower, the keep or watch-tower, the oldest part of the chateau, which he had never visited before. There she told him a tale of one of the ancient ladies of Rohan who had a lover who came from an alien and antagonistic family, who gained access to her chamber by climbing in some strange way the wall or face of the tower, until he reached the oriel window before them. He was finally caught and killed by the lords of the house on the threshold of the very room in which they were standing, she said, and she wondered if Sir Philip could, or would, have done that thing.

"Let us go to the window and look out, your little ladyship, and we will see," answered the pseudo knight gallily. "I am a sailor. I can climb almost anything that any one else can ascend."

Together and hand in hand the two stepped out on the little balcony overlooking the sea. Just outside the oriel window, the wall of the castle, following the coast line, turned sharply, making a narrow re-entrant angle where it joined the round tower. The tower and the wall were built of rough stone and their surfaces were much broken by jutting projections. The wall and tower sloped slightly inward from the base to the top.

Philip gravely surveyed the stone surface of the weather-beaten tower sweeping below the little platform on which he stood, and made up his mind that a daring climber taking advantage of the irregularities and projections in the stone, and favored by the slope and the angle, might, if he had a cool head, gain the balcony, provided no one opposed his ascent. Indeed, since the Baron de Croisic, the unfortunate lover of the legend had done so, he felt sure that he himself could accomplish the feat—given a sufficient incentive, of course. At the foot of the tower lay the little bay spoken of before, and in the bay a small boat was moored.

He looked again and more carefully, leaning far out over the wall, and with the trained observation of a sailor to whom the minutest indication may be of paramount value, he took careful note of the several projecting stones, the slope of the walls, and rapidly mapped out a series of movements by which the feat could be achieved.

"Yes," he said at last, "it could be done; it would be difficult, dangerous, in fact, but it could be done—given a sufficient incentive."

"Am I a sufficient—what is it you say? I know not that word, I think."

"You are incentive enough for anything. Shall I try it?" he asked lightly.

The Countess Anne leaned out across the coping of the balcony, and looked down. It was indeed a giddy height. Her brain reeled as she gazed. She would like very much to put Sir Philip to the test, but in the end she decided not. He might be killed, and that would be a bitter end to their little play. She recalled that Monsieur de Croisic had been thrown down there after he had been caught in the tower. The height was appalling. She was too fond of Sir Philip. So she temporized. She was woman enough for that, he thought. Indeed, he realized that she had developed marvelously in the month he had been with her. She seemed years away from dolls now. He wondered why.

"Not to-day, Sir Philip; some other time, perhaps, but not now," she answered him at last.

"As you will, Mistress Anne," he replied indifferently, and then as a thought struck him he questioned her: "Why is this place not guarded, or the wall smoothed, so that no one could climb up again?"

"I suppose it was guarded once. As for the wall, the story I read said that the lords of the tower left it just as it was, for they thought that the lesson they had given poor de Croisic would keep everybody away. Would it keep you away?"

"Not if you were here waiting for me, Lady Anne. But why is it not guarded now?" he persisted.

"I can not tell. Nobody knows this story except myself and Josette to whom I told it, I suppose. I read it the other day in some old papers I found in the library room. I doubt if even grandfather remembers it or he would look up the room. Besides, what need? There is no one who can make use of it now," she answered artlessly.

But it came into Grafton's mind that if it were difficult to climb up to that balcony window, it would be less difficult to climb down from it, and the idea of escaping sprang into his head. Indeed, it had often been with him, but he had seen no way whatever to bring it about until that afternoon, that very moment in the oriel of that tower.

Beyond the rocky edges of the shore, to seaward, the horizon was dark with the sails of ships. It was the huge fleet of Boscawen lingering off the coast in the vain hope that something might draw the French out from Brest at that time and a general engagement might be brought about. If Grafton could gain that window at night, descend the wall, seize the little boat in the cove, he might reach the ships! He stood in abstracted silence gazing seaward until the girl laid her hand lightly upon his arm.

JAPANESE IN THE MOON.

Scheme of a Resourceful Showman at a Russian Village Fair to Catch the People.

The "pope," or village priest, is generally the only source of information as to what is going on in remote villages. He is very much to the fore at present, says a recent Kazan correspondence in the London Daily News.

Father Ignatius Diatchkoff sends to the Kazan newspapers an amusing account of a fair held in his village.

"Our mujiks," he says, "are intensely patriotic, but their ideas of serving their country are somewhat strange."

"When I visited the fair on Wednesday night I saw a great crowd of our peasants standing about an itinerant rifle saloon proprietor, who was holding a telescope to his eye. They were evidently waiting their turn."

"Our village coffinmaker was aiming a gun, which he rested in the fork of a small tree. The gun was pointed toward the sky. Suddenly it went off, and a bell clanged, after which, followed loud cries of 'Ura! Got him again!'"

"After several other mujiks had taken shots, I inquired what they were aiming at, and was much surprised to hear in chorus the reply: 'The Japanese, Father.' Looking along the barrel of the gun I could see nothing but the moon, so I demanded a further explanation."

"Our brother," said a bearded giant, pointing to the showman, 'says that the man in the moon is a Makak (Japanese), and that every time we hit him in the Japanese on earth join the devil. We have killed,' he added, naively, '80 of them already.'"

An Old Saw Gainsaid.

Once upon a time two men were riding in an automobile, bound for a certain town, which neither of them had ever visited.

"Have we not made a mistake in the road?" asked one of the other.

"I am sure we are right," was the answer.

Soon they came to a hill which the automobile refused to climb.

"What is the matter?" asked the first questioner.

"Our power has given out," answered the other, "and we must stay here until assistance arrives."

"Acquaintance, Monsieur le Marquis? She has done me the honor to constitute me her royal knight, and I am trying to induce Jean-Renaud to break a spear in her behalf."

"Will he not make a proper knight, grandpa, this English gentleman?" asked Anne, fluttering to her grandfather.

"Proper knight indeed, my child," answered the old man, humoring her mood as he fondly kissed her, "and I congratulate you. Meanwhile let us descend from the romantic to the material. Breakfast is served. Monsieur Grafton, will you take your little lady and precede me? C'est bien," he soliloquized, taking a pinch of snuff as he calmly surveyed the young man and the little girl walking ceremoniously toward the door. "A pretty piece of play. I shall take care it stops in sport. The thorn watches the rose. Anne de Rohan matches with no foreigner, much less with an enemy."

CHAPTER VII.

IN THE OLD WATCH-TOWER.

GRAFTON did not find the time of his imprisonment hang heavily on his hands.

An only child, whose mother, like Anne de Rohan's, had died in his infancy, he had been early sent to sea. He knew but little of family life, therefore, and even less of children. Through his connections and influence he was not without some acquaintance with the high life of the court of England—a somewhat unusual privilege for a young naval officer—and he easily moved in the first circles in America when his duties permitted him a rare visit there. Mingling in this good society he had acquired an ease and manner which, added to his native breeding and instinctive dignity, enabled him to bear himself gracefully wherever he found himself—but he had no experience with young girls of the age of the young Countess.

Fortunately his was a sunny, lively disposition, full of laughter and humor, which made it not difficult for him to enter into the spirit of the play in accordance with his new friend's fancies. He had been attracted in some strange way to the little de Rohan from the first moment he had seen her—nay, from that morning hour when he had only heard her in the garden—and the romantic friendship which she had instituted between them, and upon which he had entered to please her and as a pastime for a prisoner, unconsciously assumed a permanent aspect.

He took part in the play with a zest which surprised him, and the more he was thrown in contact with the strange and peculiar mind of the girl the more she interested him. She was a singular mixture of the young and the old, the very childish and the very wise. She stood, as it were, poised, half-way between the intellectual level of Josette, her playmate, on the one hand, and of the courtly old marquis, her preceptor and guide, on the other.

She was too old to play at dolls, he thought, too young to play at love. And yet she had done the one and was doing the other, although the "adorable Toto" had been neglected of late for the more adorable Philip. Shrewdness, wit, and common sense mingled in equal measure with unbounded credulity and the most romantic imagination. And her impetuosity and abandon were as evident as were her wisdom or her innocence.

Grafton kissed the little brown hand so often that he rather grew to like it. Every day brought him a different love-token of some sort and a new and imaginary task to be achieved.

But Mademoiselle Anne at last tired of simulation—the most obstinate imagination will weary in the end—and determined to endeavor to impart a touch of realism to the pretty game.

One day, therefore, she took him into one of the rooms of the high tower, the keep or watch-tower, the oldest part of the chateau, which he had never visited before. There she told him a tale of one of the ancient ladies of Rohan who had a lover who came from an alien and antagonistic family, who gained access to her chamber by climbing in some strange way the wall or face of the tower, until he reached the oriel window before them. He was finally caught and killed by the lords of the house on the threshold of the very room in which they were standing, she said, and she wondered if Sir Philip could, or would, have done that thing.

"Let us go to the window and look out, your little ladyship, and we will see," answered the pseudo knight gallily. "I am a sailor. I can climb almost anything that any one else can ascend."

Together and hand in hand the two stepped out on the little balcony overlooking the sea. Just outside the oriel window, the wall of the castle, following the coast line, turned sharply, making a narrow re-entrant angle where it joined the round tower. The tower and the wall were built of rough stone and their surfaces were much broken by jutting projections. The wall and tower sloped slightly inward from the base to the top.

Philip gravely surveyed the stone surface of the weather-beaten tower sweeping below the little platform on which he stood, and made up his mind that a daring climber taking advantage of the irregularities and projections in the stone, and favored by the slope and the angle, might, if he had a cool head, gain the balcony, provided no one opposed his ascent. Indeed, since the Baron de Croisic, the unfortunate lover of the legend had done so, he felt sure that he himself could accomplish the feat—given a sufficient incentive, of course. At the foot of the tower lay the little bay spoken of before, and in the bay a small boat was moored.

He looked again and more carefully, leaning far out over the wall, and with the trained observation of a sailor to whom the minutest indication may be of paramount value, he took careful note of the several projecting stones, the slope of the walls, and rapidly mapped out a series of movements by which the feat could be achieved.

"Yes," he said at last, "it could be done; it would be difficult, dangerous, in fact, but it could be done—given a sufficient incentive."

"Am I a sufficient—what is it you say? I know not that word, I think."

"You are incentive enough for anything. Shall I try it?" he asked lightly.

The Countess Anne leaned out across the coping of the balcony, and looked down. It was indeed a giddy height. Her brain reeled as she gazed. She would like very much to put Sir Philip to the test, but in the end she decided not. He might be killed, and that would be a bitter end to their little play. She recalled that Monsieur de Croisic had been thrown down there after he had been caught in the tower. The height was appalling. She was too fond of Sir Philip. So she temporized. She was woman enough for that, he thought. Indeed, he realized that she had developed marvelously in the month he had been with her. She seemed years away from dolls now. He wondered why.

"Not to-day, Sir Philip; some other time, perhaps, but not now," she answered him at last.

"As you will, Mistress Anne," he replied indifferently, and then as a thought struck him he questioned her: "Why is this place not guarded, or the wall smoothed, so that no one could climb up again?"

"I suppose it was guarded once. As for the wall, the story I read said that the lords of the tower left it just as it was, for they thought that the lesson they had given poor de Croisic would keep everybody away. Would it keep you away?"

"Not if you were here waiting for me, Lady Anne. But why is it not guarded now?" he persisted.

"I can not tell. Nobody knows this story except myself and Josette to whom I told it, I suppose. I read it the other day in some old papers I found in the library room. I doubt if even grandfather remembers it or he would look up the room. Besides, what need? There is no one who can make use of it now," she answered artlessly.

But it came into Grafton's mind that if it were difficult to climb up to that balcony window, it would be less difficult to climb down from it, and the idea of escaping sprang into his head. Indeed, it had often been with him, but he had seen no way whatever to bring it about until that afternoon, that very moment in the oriel of that tower.

Beyond the rocky edges of the shore, to seaward, the horizon was dark with the sails of ships. It was the huge fleet of Boscawen lingering off the coast in the vain hope that something might draw the French out from Brest at that time and a general engagement might be brought about. A Continual Strain.

Many men and women are constantly subjected to what they commonly term

"a continual strain" because of some financial or family trouble. It wears and distresses them both mentally and physically, affecting their nerves badly and bringing on liver and kidney ailments, with the attendant evils of constipation,

loss of appetite, sleeplessness, low vitality and despondency. They cannot, as a rule, get rid of this "continual strain," but they can remedy the health destroying effects by taking frequent doses of Green's August Flower. It tones up the liver, stimulates the kidneys, insures healthy bodily functions, gives vim and spirit to one's whole being, and eventually dispels the physical or mental distress caused by that "continual strain."

ular size, 75c. At all druggists.—W. T.

Healthy Mothers.

Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child,

when Dr. Boche's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup;

so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectora-tion easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough-racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 25c; large

BEST IN HER CLASS.

ARMORED CRUISER COLORADO SETS NEW SEA RECORD.

Averages 22.26 Knots an Hour in Trial Run—Brooklyn and New York Put in Shade by the Performance.

The armored cruiser Colorado broke all speed records for her type of fighting vessel in the United States navy in her trial run the other day, by covering a total course of 88 knots, or nautical miles, at an average speed of 22.26 knots an hour.

This was not the Colorado's best performance, however. In a great burst, when approaching the end of the course, the huge engines drove the immense hull through the water at a speed of 23.33 knots, and this was maintained for a distance of 6.6 knots, showing what the Colorado would be capable of in an emergency.

Only two of the large ships of the United States navy have exceeded this record of the Colorado, the Minneapolis and the Columbia. They are not of the same class, however, being designed as commerce destroyers and carrying little armor and a much lighter equipment of guns. The Minneapolis has a record of 23.073 knots and the Columbia 22.8 knots. The New York and Brooklyn, which formerly held the lead in the armored cruiser class, must take a back seat. The Brooklyn's record was 22 knots an hour and the New York's 21 knots.

The Colorado was designed for a speed of 22 knots, which is exceeded by more than a quarter of a knot.

The total time for the course was 57 minutes 7 seconds. The engines worked smoothly and developed an average horse power of 23,000, and the ponderous twin screws whirled at an average of 128 revolutions a minute, and at times made 130 revolutions.

The trial was held over the usual New England course. Starting off Cape Ann, the vessel steamed 44 knots up the coast to Cape Porpoise, Me., made a brilliant turn and then started on the run back to Cape Ann.

In the turning, "figure eight" and other maneuvering tests the ship gave splendid satisfaction, particularly in her complete turn in a circle the diameter of which was a little less than twice her length.

HARVESTER FOR WET DAYS

Kansas Farmer Saves Wheat by Attaching Gasoline Engines to Ordinary Machine.

Clay county (Kan.) farmers, especially those who live on low ground where standing water has made the ground soft, have used a new contrivance this year to get their wheat harvested. "Mr. Watts, a machinist, is the originator.

It was impossible to get into his field with an ordinary harvester, and early in the season he saw that strenuous measures would be necessary to save his crop. He hit upon the plan of detaching the running gear of the ordinary harvester from the wheels and attaching a gasoline engine in such a way that it would do the work of running the mower and binding the wheat. The only thing necessary for the horses to do was to pull the binder through the fields.

The binder was taken into the field and worked perfectly. Wheat was obtained that had been given up as lost. Whenever a muddy place was reached and the wheels slipped, the gasoline engine continued to run the binder, and the horses could drag the whole machine through the mud, thus harvesting the wheat. It made no difference whether the wheels of the machine turned.

The reason why the Buck's Hot Blast is the most wonderful heater in the world is because it is so constructed that it turns into fuel and burns the 38 per cent. of gas in soft coal instead of permitting it to escape through the chimney, as other heaters do. In a Buck's Hot Blast 1 1/4 tons of soft coal or slack will produce as much heat as one ton of anthracite or hard coal.
